

Galleys

Increased life expectancy – more value

Because galleys can be very weighty from their size alone, Bucher's unique lightweight construction technique makes a big difference. In comparison to conventionally designed galleys, our aluminium frame structure not only avoids every unnecessary gram of weight but also increases the galley lifespan – ten to fifteen corrosion-free years are ensured.

Thanks to our technical know-how and years of experience in engineering, we guarantee high structural stability and innovative designs. As with all our products, we focus on lightness and make optimal use of available space.

Our unique lightweight galleys include:

- Hard anodised aluminium surfaces and frame extrusions
- Powder-coated panels
- Precisely machined doors, pressure or turn locks
- Various custom-tailored equipment components

These high-quality features are standard for us. On top of that, customer-specific requests and requirements such as different dimensions and distinct fittings are our specialty. No wonder our galleys have been installed in many of the current passenger aircraft types like Airbus or Boeing. Whether it's for single or twin aisle models, galleys from Bucher will give you more possibilities – for many years to come.

More service – more value

You formulate the challenge – we will find the solution. One of our technically savvy account managers will help you with your project and the Request for Proposal (RFP). Being in contact with airlines and OEMs on a daily basis, Bucher account managers ensure continuity and provide valuable insights and experiences throughout all project phases.

In modern catering, some devices are essential. Our specialists will advise you on the best choice for inserts, while keeping a firm eye on costs. We save costs and improve ergonomics with clever layout choices and careful recommendations. For example, in the fine-tuning of your catering concept, galley layouts and equipment choices can incorporate new trends and market developments.
