

Front Row Monuments

Easy to apply – full of opportunities

Bucher is known worldwide for their reliable and lightweight designs. Nowadays, airlines strive for both space-saving customization and robust constructions. With its profound knowledge and years of experience in Galley engineering, Bucher offers a perfect solution with their customized Front Row Monuments (FRMs). In our projects, we are able to create unique designs that fulfill both customer requirements and aircraft manufacturer's specifications.

As Bucher's FRMs are based on the same principles as our well-known lightweight Galleys, customers can expect the same quality and reliability.

Benefit from customized advantages such as:

- Integration of the personal IFE
- Extra storage compartments for the Passenger
- Various storage options such as a coatroom or a curtain garage
- Wide range of unique styling and design possibilities

These enhanced options are part of every new cabin design project, but they can also be integrated when upgrading or re-configuring any F/C or B/C cabin with new seats. In addition to its aluminium-based designs, Bucher furthermore possesses expertise in composite material processing. Constructed with lightweight honeycomb core panels, Bucher FRMs provide an array of surface options and high-quality decorative finishing materials. In this way, customers are able to set visually attractive accents and generate a highly customized brand experience.

Smart combinations – more passenger space

Bucher consistently focuses on your needs and requests. Monuments that face the front row of first or business class present a number of opportunities for individual optimization. By rethinking the front row, we can, for example, integrate personal IFE or provide extra storage compartments to create more space to be enjoyed by front row passengers.

Obviously, Bucher solutions also include the back wall of the galley. Because it often faces the front row, Bucher has developed ways to better utilize this space in order to enhance both interior design and cabin efficacy. Taking advantage of customized FRMs allows airlines to offer more to its passengers.
